The Road Not Taken

Two roads diverged in a yellow wood,
And sorry I could not travel both
And be one traveller, long I stood
And looked down one as far as I could
To where it bent in the undergrowth;
Then took the other, as just as fair,
And having perhaps the better claim,
Because it was grassy and wanted wear;
Though as for that the passing there
Had worn them really about the same,
And both that morning equally lay
In leaves no step had trodden back.
Oh, I kept the first for another day!
Yet knowing how way leads on to way,
I doubted if I should ever come back.
I shall be telling this with a sigh
Somewhere ages and ages hence:
Two roads diverged in a wood, and I -
I took the one less travelled by,
And that has made all the difference.

Dedication

Miss Geneva Purcell
Director Of Nursing

We dedicate this edition of Forever White to Miss Purcell.

We would like at this time to say welcome, for this has been your first year with us; and thank you, for the many changes you have helped to bring about over the past year, which have made the student's lot a great deal easier.

Message To The Graduands

It affords me a great deal of pleasure to greet you through the media of "Forever White." It has been an honor and a privilege to have had the opportunity to be associated with you during the past year. May I extend my sincere congratulations to each and everyone, and my very best wishes for your future success and happiness.

I consider you to be standing at a vantage point, as you prepare for graduation, from which you cannot help looking both backward and forward; letting your memory dwell on the experiences of the past three years. Experiences, through which you have learned lessons of infinite value - the discipline of self, the understanding and regard for others, the faculty of instant service, the habit of precision, the power of observation, the quality of discretion, the desire for knowledge about more and more things; those thousands of details which have filled your days and nights.

Looking forward, your imagination undoubtedly has already anticipated somewhat, the possibilities and the responsibilities of the future. Whatever your future may be, in the hospital, the home, the school, or in the community, endowed with the graces and qualities that have set you apart, you have unbounded opportunities for service to others.

One cannot foretell what exciting experiences lie ahead for you, but one can be fully assured that in the area of service through nursing, there will always be the unexpected, the continual order of change. However, in this vast universe of change and materialism, let us never lose sight of the true values of life. It is through the giving of love and service to one's fellows that life's richest satisfactions become one's own.

M. Geneva Purcell

Dr. J. A. Wallace
Executive Director

"Public opinion, though often formed on a wrong basis, yet generally has a strong underlying sense of justice."

- Abraham Lincoln.

You have come as students to one of the best teaching hospitals on this continent to prepare yourselves for service to humanity as members of the Nursing Profession. When you graduate you will inherit an enviable reputation that has been earned by those who have preceded you as graduates of the University Hospital, and by the physicians and nurses who taught them. This reputation insures that you will be treated with respect wherever your professional activities take you, and it places on you the personal responsibility for maintaining the high ethical and moral standards that it represents.

Nursing, like Medicine, is passing through an era in which its public relations leave much to be desired. It is our belief that the public's opinion of the Professions has been formed on a wrong basis because we are providing better care to our patients now than ever before. We are worried and confused by charges that we no longer care for patients as individuals, and that the humane aspect of our professional activities no longer exists.

In spite of this belief there probably is a strong underlying sense of justice in the charges that are made. We have become so charmed with the technical and scientific advances that have been made in patient care, and we are so busy putting them to use, that we probably don't have the personal approach that was so beneficial to patients in the past. Perhaps the pendulum has swung too far to the other side of the scale to provide the optimum conditions for recovery.

In the years that lie ahead for each of you there is much that can be done to change the public's opinion of your Profession. Always remember that you are dealing with people in the total sense of the word, and that they are much more complex than scientific machines. The care of each patient in the most beneficial manner will become automatic to you only when you learn to use your heart as well as your head and your hands in the practice of your Profession.

Miss Ruth M. Thompson
Associate Director Nursing Education

To Class '63

"Sunshine and shadow, laughter and tears,
These are forever the paints of the years
Splashed on the canvas of life day by day."

From Life's Canvas, Edgar A. Guest.

The successful way in which you have accepted both your sunshine and your shadow is a measure of your ability to meet the future for you have had both laughter and tears in your three years in training.

Your School of Nursing wishes you success and happiness and the ability to use the "paints of the years" with courage and fortitude.

Greetings and congratulations class of 1963
on having "stayed the course."

Abernathy has said, "the hospital is the only proper College in which to rear a true disciple of Aesculapius." This is equally true of the disciples of Florence Nightingale.

Through the years, the University of Alberta Hospital School of Nursing has become one of the foremost in Canada and has trained some of the leading members of your profession. We are proud of them and you and wish you luck wherever you may go and also that you will always--"Still in thy right hand carry gentle peace."

A Tribute

Dr. J.R. Vant

To Dr. J.R. Vant on his retirement from the teaching staff of the University of Alberta.

"They give that they may live, for to withhold is to perish.

Surely he who is worthy to receive his days and his nights, is worthy of all else from you.

And he who has deserved to drink from the ocean of life deserves to fill his cup from your little stream.

And what desert greater shall there be, than that which lies in the courage and the confidence, nay the charity, of receiving?

And who are you that men should rend their bosom and unveil their pride, that you may see their worth naked and their pride unabashed?

See first that you yourself deserve to be a giver, and an instrument of giving.

For in truth it is life that gives unto life - while you, who deem yourself a giver, are but a witness."

"Therefore trust the physician, and drink his remedy in silence and tranquility:

For his hand, though heavy and hard, is guided by the tender hand of the unseen,

And the cup he brings, though it burn your lips has been fashioned of the clay which the Potter has moistened with His own sacred tears."

What is a Yearbook? A Yearbook is persistence and long hours of hard work; it is pictures to get, letters to write, advertising to sell, and pages to set up. It is all of these things and much more. A Yearbook is a memory, of good times and close friends; of three trying but worthwhile years.

To the graduates of 1963, our big sisters, we extend sincere congratulations and may you always remember the University of Alberta Hospital.

A Message to the Graduands

At last you are nurses! Those of us on the hospital staff who have been associated with you during your three years of training rejoice with you, and are warmed by your enthusiasm and sense of achievement.

Standing at the threshold of your professional career, you pause to consider thoughtfully the life that lies ahead. Life is given to you. None of you chose it. It is up to each of you to decide if this gift is an unfortunate accident or a glorious blessing with great possibilities. Does life actually have a goal, a purpose, some central meaning? Your answer to this question will determine to a large degree the kind of person and the kind of nurse you will be.

Not so many years ago the majority of roads on the prairies were mud roads. When it rained, deep ruts were dug into the roads by the wheels of traffic, and once you got down into these ruts with your car you couldn't get out. Someone with a wry sense of humour erected a sign which read: "Choose your rut well; you'll be in it for the next twenty miles." Life is a great deal like this. In our earliest years we do not choose our ruts, we accept them. By the time most of us reach our twenties, we begin to reflect on what life means for us individually.

Our society holds the belief that success, pleasure, popularity, fame, and financial prosperity are legitimate goals in life. You can accept these goals without questioning their validity, if you wish. But there is another choice: Jesus indicated that one has to lose life in order to find it. He saw the goal of life as a process of BECOMING--becoming a unique, creative individual who responds to God's love by loving and giving himself to others in service. This love is not grasping or selfish; neither is it sentimental or wishy-washy. It is an approach to life whereby one recognizes all persons as children of God, and thus as having infinite worth. It means that you do not allow them to dominate or use you. Think of what this creative kind of love could do to a nurse's relationship to her patients and to her associates! As you lose yourself in service to others, you actually find that which makes your own life more meaningful.

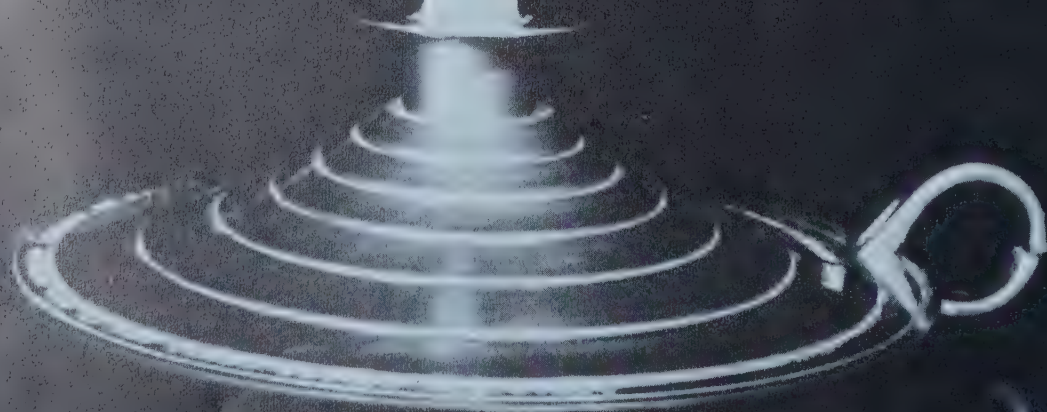

Best wishes for many years of creative living and creative nursing.

Ronald K. Dungan

Florence Nightingale Pledge

I solemnly pledge myself before God and in the presence of this assembly to pass my life in purity and to practice my profession faithfully.

I will abstain from whatever is deleterious and mischievous and will not take or knowingly administer any harmful drug. I will do all in my power to maintain and elevate the standard of my profession, and hold in confidence all personal matters committed to my keeping and all family affairs coming to my knowledge in the practice of my calling. With loyalty will I endeavor to aid the physician in his work, and devote myself to the welfare of those committed to my care.

MARIE TOVELL

Valedictory

January 1963

This evening on the occasion of our graduation, we are happy and excited to step forward as new graduates. We hope to face our new experiences, some of them far from here, strengthened by the training we have had in our hospital and the courage and self-confidence we have acquired through our months of clinical experience and study in theory.

As you have already seen we are graduates representing four departments of the hospital. I would like to express my appreciation to the members of the other classes who have provided me with information about their training and experiences so that it could be included in this valedictory.

The radiographers of the X-ray department are trained to assist the physician with diagnostic procedures. Selfish comforts must be forgotten for emergencies do not happen at convenient times. Whether it be meal time, day or night, the patient's welfare may depend on his diagnostic procedure.

One sometimes wonders though, if the hospital designers considered the patient's welfare to the same degree. The X-ray department is well noted for its excellent air conditioning. Ask any patient who has worn the routine hospital gown. It is difficult to establish whether the gowns were created for ventilation or whether the ventilation should bear witness to the design of the gown.

Conscientious work plus hours of lectures, studying and exams equal a graduate laboratory technologist tonight. To balance this equation we must add countless friendships, an abundance of happiness, occasional discouragements and rewarding achievements. During their two years together, they have rotated through the various departments of the labs, and have become confident in taking venous blood, calculating the amount of protein in serum, identifying bacterial organisms, and performing E. C. G.'s.

Someone once said, "Be the best of whatever you are", and the lab technicians certainly live up to this standard as they produce results that are important and accurate.

What a year the past one has been for the dietetic interns! After four years of university training they are suddenly thrust into hospital life--trembling in stiff white uniforms which unfortunately during practical work in the kitchen become soggy. Oops! A spill! A splash! And there she goes--dripping--after skinning liver.

Straining their executive abilities to plan and organize refreshments for the Nurses' Capping was a must--they couldn't run short for the hungry student nurses.

Other problems had to be solved too--tracking one tray out of 1000 served--lost in the shuffle of meal service.

Hanging fir boughs for the Christmas Coffee Party was fun even if they did look like moose antlers.

Through trial and error, sharing the problems and the fun, they have emerged as specialists capable of assuming their enlarged responsibilities.

As nursing students my classmates and I have also shared many experiences--all the way from our first cautious meetings in the lounge three years ago to the exciting morning last January when an over-eager classmate ran up and down our hall with bells and rattles to remind us that we could wear our white uniforms for the first time.

We are glad to have reached the goal that was so distant three years ago, but we are sad to leave the many friends we have made--it will be a long time before we stop missing our classmates--someone always handy to talk, sympathize, lend clothes, or rarely, help study.

But amid all the fun, we learned important lessons. We were told in psychiatry that our main purpose was "to cure sometimes, relieve often and comfort always." We believe it is an important principle for all of nursing. As long as we remember to comfort always--that the well-being and happiness of others is to be considered above all else, we will have learned well the most important lesson of our training.

As our departments become more specialized and we develop specific responsibilities in our fields of endeavour, we realize more than ever that we must work together to be of maximum benefit to those committed to our care.

We would like to express our thanks to our instructors, who have given us their time and knowledge to enable us to reach greater heights of achievement; and especially to our parents, who have done so much to make our training possible. Your love, encouragement, and support has often kept us going through difficult or discouraging phases.

JESSIE INGLEDEW

Valedictory

September 1963

Mister Chairman, Honored Guests, Ladies and Gentlemen, Fellow Graduates:

Tonight we have reached a goal but with the past and future in mind we prefer to think of this moment as a step in life's staircase. Our high school matriculation was the concrete base, solid and necessary, to our future work.

Now on the eve of this important day we think of steps we have cut while a student nurse. In reference to character - perseverance that has brought us to the finish, unselfishness, in realizing that the patients' needs were greater than our own. We learned to accept with increasing cheerfulness assignments that interfered with our pleasure. We gained patience that kept us in sane mind through eight hours of Women's Orthopedics. We developed an awareness of others, the delight of sharing and the joys of close friendship through living with other girls. We came to terms with life when we faced pain, suffering and death, discovering the greatest gift was the gift of time. In view of these qualities need we say that we gained maturity. In reference to knowledge, we developed a total picture of the patient and his condition bringing into use our knowledge of Anatomy and Physiology, Medicine, Surgery, and Psychiatry. The mechanics of nursing became just a PART of being a nurse.

This completes of our staircase thus far. There are future milestones to reach - B. Sc. degrees, post graduate degrees, MRS. degrees - the role of wife and mother certainly deserves a place in the school of advanced learning. I know our education will continue though it may vary from canning new green peas to learning to ride a camel in Egypt.

By nature we are a climbing class. Was it not September '63 who thought it their bounden duty to transport a certain lounge carpet to the attic four floors above the day before the new class came into training. Or climbing out of the front window to hang our beloved class flag on "Pinking" day. Quite orthodox behaviour of course. Or climbing up the ladder to enjoy one of our class parties, a barn dance. Or relieving a classmate's room of screen and window to climb onto the roof of the auditorium to sing "Vote Social Credit" to a Liberal Campaign Rally just leaving the Jubilee Auditorium.

These are but a few of the precious memories we share as classmates. It is hard to describe that which unites us so well - being elated at a classmate's good fortune and reassuring one another when life itself is rather gloomy. We may have one last nickel but will share our doughnut with a friend because she is penniless.

And our patients - they seemed to sense our low ebbs and with a few words, "You are a wonderful nurse", could make you see a shaft of light at the top of the steps.

The instructors, class room and clinical, made the material available for us. With the cautious words, "You reap what you sew", they directed our minds to the higher steps. The doctors under whose influence and teachings we worked gained our admiration and respect.

We realize the tremendous value in the encouragement given by our families. From our parents came the incentive perhaps, the monetary assistance at times and most of all their thoughtfulness. The many letters, phone calls, or visits have meant so much to us. In some instances, our older brothers and sisters, enrolled in vocations of higher learning were our guiding light.

All of these people mentioned have been in a sense our hand rail - providing us with support and guidance. Without it we may have slipped and fallen.

And to my classmates - may we keep climbing.

"Nature that fram'd us of four elements,

Warring within our breasts for regiment,

Doth teach us all to have aspiring minds;

Our souls, whose faculties can comprehend -

The wondrous architecture of the world;

And measure every wandering planet's course,

Still climbing after knowledge infinite.

And always moving as the restless spheres,

Will as to wear ourselves and never rest,

Until we reach the ripest fruit of all.

The perfect bliss and sole of all felicity,

The sweet fruition of an earthly crown."

In Memoriam

Merrilyn Nicholson of class January, 1964, passed away on June 2nd, 1963 at twenty years of age.

Born and raised in Wainwright, Merrilyn attended public, elementary and high school there.

She is survived by her mother and father, Mr. and Mrs. J. Nicholson, three sisters and four brothers.

A great lover of the arts, Merrilyn enjoyed music, painting and poetry. Of the latter, she had done some composition on her own.

"The Prayer of Saint Francis of Assisi" was Merrilyn's favorite poem and follows below.

Lord make me an instrument of thy peace
Where there is hatred, let me sow love,
Where there is injury, pardon,
Where there is doubt, faith.
Where there is despair, hope,
Where there is darkness, light,
And where there is sadness, joy.

Divine Master, grant that I may not so much seek to be consoled as to console, to be understood as to understand, to be loved as to love, for it is in giving that we receive, it is in pardoning, that we are pardoned, and it is in dying that we are born to eternal life.

Somebody said it couldn't be done,
But he with a chuckle replied
That "Maybe it couldn't" but he would be one
Who wouldn't say so 'til he tried.
So he buckled right in with the trace of a grin
On his face. If he worried he hid it.
He started to sing as he tackled the thing
That couldn't be done and he did it.
